WEDNESDAY EVENING, SEPT. 11

THE MULE AND THE BEES -A writer with some of the literary traits of the "Docerick's" of a querter century ago, composed a comical "epic," a column long, in the Californian, doscribing the wotul defeat and sad end of a bad mule, who kicked everything, and finally died kicking bees. The following extract will do:

The mule, which had wasdered up close to a large bee hive, got stung. His eyes lighted up as if that was just what he was looking for. He turned on the bee hive and took aim. He kicked. In ten seconds the only piece of bee hive I could see was about the size a man feels twelve years. His head was without a hair on when he has told a joke that falls on the company like a picce of sed news. This picce was in the sir. It was being kicked at.

The bees swarmed. They swarmed a good deal. They lit on that mule earnestly. After he had kicked the last piece of bee hive so nigh that he could not reach it any more, he stopped THE SWIFT SPECIFIC COMPANY, Profor an instant.

The mule turned loose. I never saw saything equal it. He was enveloped in a dense for of cornestness and bees, and filled with enthusiasm and stings. The more he kicked the higher he arose from the ground. I may, have been mistaken, for I was somewhat ex e ted and very much delighted, bar that mu seemed to rise as high as the tops of the penper tre s. He would open and shut himself like a trog swimming. Sometimes, when he was in mid-air, he would look like he was

He finally got so he did not rise clear of the ground but he continued to hick with both feet for half an hour, next with first one foot and then the other for another balf hour, then with his right foot every few minutes, the intervals growing longer and longer, until he finally was still. His head dropped, his hip hung lower and lower. The bees stungen. He looked as if he thought a mean, sneaking advantage had been taken of him.

I retired from the scene. Early the next morning I returned. The sun came slow y up mon behind the eastern hills. The light forege of the peoper trees tremeled with his morning carcas. His golden kiss fell upon the opening roses. A bee could be seen flying hither, another this her. The mule lay near the scene of yesterday's struggle. Peace had came to him. He was dead. Too much kicking squies:

Perry, Ga , April 14, 1879. I have watched the use of the medicine now known as "Swift's Sychillitic Specific" over fifty years, and have never heard of a failure to cure years, and have never heard of a failure to cure when properly taken. I commenced the use of it on my slaves between 1850 and 1855 as also did a number of my neighbors, and in every case that came within my knowledge it effected a cure. In 1835 Geo. Walker, bought at auction a slave not warranted. After the purchase it was discovered that he had had Syphilis for trade years. His head was without trades years. four weeks he was sound and well, and in a short time had as fine a head of hair as was ever owned by a negro. He owned this slave many years, and henever had any return of the dis-ease, nor jest a day's work.
